

WITH GARY OWENS

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

Show K841-6

Airdate: February 11/12, 1984

This week on SOUNDTRACK OF THE 60's we present a very special Special. With Valentines day just around the corner Gary Owens looks and listens to the romance of Roy Orbison, Brenda Lee, Johnny Mathis and of course; the big O will be playing the song that the two of you remember.

That song was often by one of our special guests this week. And that would be Johnny Mathis. You'll hear why Johnny's a bit embarrassed when he meets some of his fans. And from Johnny a song that Clint Eastwood really let get to him.

Remember "The Ten Commandments of Love" by the Moonglows? We'll be looking at those "suggestions" sixties style and in order. You'd like a sample? Well, Roy Head said we should "Treat Her Right" and Barry Gordy had some friends of his the Contours ask the age old question "Do You Love Me?"

Gary talks to Gary, Puckett that is, a young man fond of women in songs. Gary will also spend time with Brenda Lee and what she did when she was 19 and in love. Brenda believed in one song very much back in 1960 "I Want To Be Wanted" and proved it with someone named Ronnie.

In this weeks movie memory we turn the lights down very low for a story of love and passion. It's Claude LeLouch's "A Man And A Woman." Released in 1966 the movie became a cult classic. Not just on college campuses but in small cities around America. A simple story of love appeals to everyone. It's still playing check your local listings.

Do you know what else was released just two years before in 1964. In fact it was the second week in February of the year. The Beatles came to the states for the first time. And had the number three song that week with "She Loves You. Lesley Gore followed with You Don't Own Me." And making the trip perfect the Beatles were at number one with the perfect Valentine song, "I Want to Hold Your Hand."

All this and more this week on SOUNDTRACK OF THE 60's.
